

Joint Ventures & Collaborations

Antitrust Life Sciences and Healthcare Capabilities

Overview

Our Antitrust lawyers regularly counsel clients on joint ventures, strategic alliances, and other collaborations that are important for achieving corporate goals. Our experience covers a broad variety of arrangements: stand-alone joint ventures involving the creation of new entities, minority investments, complex contractual collaborations, teaming agreements, master affiliation agreements, licensing arrangements, research and development, manufacturing, co-promotion and co-marketing alliances, stand-alone distribution and supply agreements, and industry blockchain and other multi-party collaborations.

Our joint venture practice grasps the intricacies that intellectual property, data, privacy, blockchain, and the regulatory regime bring to the antitrust risks of a collaboration. We recognize that counseling on these types of matters involve complicated and future-oriented antitrust issues. Based on a deep understanding of our clients' businesses, we provide practical and useful strategy to reduce antitrust risk.

Our experience in both domestic and international strategic alliances is extensive and involves a variety of IP disciplines and industries, including pharmaceutical, medical device, biotechnology, diagnostics, and human and animal healthcare.
